

Client: El Tucán
Date: June 20, 2016
Outlet: New York Post
Unique Visitors Monthly: 8,772,247

Forget South Beach — this is Miami’s coolest ‘hood

If your Miami radar is set only to South Beach, it’s time to explore new turf this summer.

Across the MacArthur Causeway — nestled between Overtown and Brickell — a boom is churning along the banks of the Miami River.

This emerging hood is attracting a slew of sleek boîtes, bites, sleeps and boutiques that prioritize a quality, local vibe over the party-till-mañana scene on the beach.

Exemplifying this embrace of the low-key is the Underline, a $120 million High Line-inspired park (now in the early-planning stages) that will eventually snake through the neighborhood.

Here’s a tour of the new Miami River District — and its array of sophisticated spots with a South Florida twist.

El Tucán

Dress to impress at this upscale supper club straight out of old-school Havana. Tables seat up to 15, and the $85 tasting menu includes a nine-course Latin-inspired meal, served family-style, and accompanied by a live 1940s-Cuba-inspired cabaret performance. Or shimmy up for a spot at the bar, where handcrafted cocktails like the Rosadito are “tumbled,” not stirred.

<http://nypost.com/2016/06/20/forget-south-beach-this-is-miamis-coolest-hood/#>